Reporter, Tucker Fratz

The Bear Creek 4-H Club held its April meeting with a strong focus on community service, leadership, and learning.

The meeting began with the Pledge of Allegiance and the 4-H pledge, followed by club business and updates on upcoming spring activities. A highlight of the evening was a presentation by Ava Cosner, who shared details about her Diamond Clover project focused on improvements to the poultry barn. After her presentation, club members showed their support by donating money toward her project, demonstrating the 4-H values of service and teamwork.

In addition to supporting one of their own members, the club also donated to the Deep Creek Volunteer Fire Department in appreciation for the continued use of their facility for monthly meetings.

Following the meeting, members were given a special opportunity to tour the fire department. Josh Hook led the group through the building, explaining the different types of equipment and vehicles used in emergency response. Members enjoyed seeing the fire trucks up close and learning about the important role firefighters play in keeping the community safe and even getting the opportunity to dress up in the gear.

The April meeting was both educational and meaningful, allowing members to give back to their community while gaining firsthand knowledge about local emergency services.

Bear Creek 4-H looks forward to continuing its busy spring season with more hands-on learning and community involvement.
