Whether it's making gourmet jams or jellies, baking bread, and cakes, catering festive events or creating and packaging special dinners for one, food related businesses are becoming increasingly popular as a way to earn a living (or to add to your income). The cook's creative flair, combined with business practicality will succeed even in tough economic times, if the enterprise is given the appropriate research and planning before its launch.

AGENDA TOPICS:

Guiding food entrepreneurs through the initial steps to start a business, this workshop combines educational presentations, guest speakers and a highly interactive learning environment to address:

- Welcome & Introductions

- Getting Started

A discussion of the challenges and advantages of owning a food related business.

- Legally Speaking

Learn the role that DHMH will have in your venture—a chance to talk about licensure and the inspection process.

- Developing a Game Plan

A business idea must be doable, marketable, and profitable to provide a reliable forecast about the feasibility of your business.

- Finding a Niche Market

The importance of accurately targeting your “first and best customer”; using the four P’s of price, product, placement, and promotion.

- Introduction to Food Safety for New Food Businesses

Appropriate food preparation and storage methods lengthen shelf life and lessen liability. The extra attention paid a few specific points in your operation will save time for you and improve product quality.

- Labeling your Food Product

Selecting the right packaging—materials, labels, and the information provided—can make or break your products future in the marketplace.

- Pricing Your Product

It takes money to make money! A discussion about self-financing, loans, and grants. Also covered is revenue generation through effective pricing.
