Master Gardeners are volunteer educators with the University of Maryland Extension. They teach people safe, effective gardening techniques that build healthier gardens and communities.

Master Gardeners give educational talks, create demonstration gardens, offer plant clinics and therapeutic horticulture programs, and host information booths at community events.

If you like to garden, learn, and give back to your community, you could be a Master Gardener. Learn more by calling or e-mailing Annette Cormany at 301-791-1604 or acormany@umd.edu.
